

Some Issues of Possible Interest to Library Users:New Journal: *Journal in Instrumentation

The Institute of Physics (IOP) and the International School for Advanced Studies (SISSA) have launched a new online-only journal, designed to support the needs of the instrumentation community: Journal in Instrumentation (JINST). The journal will publish peer-reviewed papers as well as technical reports, instrumentation theses and a Question & Answers forum on instrumentation issues. Access to JINST will be free of charge in 2006 (www.iop.org/journals/jinst)

O'Reilly E-Books

The ESO Libraries have started a subscription to the O'Reilly "Safari Technical Library" (www.safaribooksonline.com). If you are interested, please contact Maria Eugenia Gómez (mgomez@eso.org) to obtain a user ID and password.

Astronomical Journal* announces "e-first" publishing

The University of Chicago Press will introduce e-first publishing with the July 2006 AJ issue (vol. 132, issue 1). "With e-first publication, papers in an issue are published as soon as ready on the newly redesigned AJ Web site, www.journals.uchicago.edu/AJ, with final volumes, issue, and page numbers."

spectroscopyNOW.com

Wiley Publishers provide a free-of-charge portal for the spectroscopy community: www.spectroscopynow.com. Techniques covered at this web site include, among others, X-ray spectrometry, infrared, atomic spectroscopy, ultraviolet.
